SPRING MEDICINE

"The beneficial effects from HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA have been more speedy than from any other preparation of the kind." E. S. WOODMAN, Wilton, N. H.

"I had no appetite, no strength, and was feeling as mean as any one could, and be about my work. As soon as I began taking HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, my food relished, and I felt myself growing stronger every day. I thoroughly believe in the value of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA."

"If people want a medicine to go all through 'em and make 'em up, tell 'em to take Hood's Sarsaparilla." FREEMAN N. BIXBY, Meredith Village, N. H.

F. H. PINKHAM, editor Newmarket, N. H. Advocate, writes:—

"I have taken four bottles of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, this spring, and it has done me good.

"My appetite was very poor, my bowels all out of order, suffering from the piles, my general health was in a very low condition, and had no ambition to do anything. Have just finished the third bottle of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA, and my appetite is excellent, my bowels regular (no trouble from piles), my general health and strength restored."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Will positively cure—when in the power of medicine—dyspepsia, indigestion, headache, constipation, biliousness, loss of appetite, general debility, pains in the back, kidney complaint, female weaknesses, catarrh, scrofula, scrofulous and cancerous humors, ulcers, sores, tumors, salt rheum, and all diseases arising from an impure state or low condition of the blood.

"My wife has been suffering with debility, appetite poor, extremely tired on waking up in the morning, and she felt all wrong generally. After she had taken HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA a few days her appetite improved. That feeling of extreme weariness in the morning has entirely disappeared."

I cordially attest my faith, backed by actual trial, in the efficacy of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA as a curative for headache, biliousness, and that condition which, at times, pervades us all, commonly called "the blues." J. J. LOVELL, Greenpoint, N. Y.

Everybody Smiles

In Lowell when they read advertisements claiming greatest sale and popularity, at home, of any preparation of Sarsaparilla, other than Hood's.

The advertisements referred to led the proprietors of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA to make a canvass of the druggists of Lowell, which revealed the fact that quite a number of them did not keep other Sarsaparillas, and established to a certainty that the Druggists of Lowell—the home of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA—sell ten bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, to one of all other kinds.

Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5.00. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

Purify Your Blood

Is a compound, concentrated extract, skillfully prepared, by a process peculiar to itself, of the active medicinal properties of the most approved alteratives, tonics, and blood purifying remedies of the vegetable kingdom, known to medical science as Alteratives, Blood Purifiers, Diuretics, Tonics, and Stomachics. These articles have been used for years, and their medicinal value is appreciated by every mother in the land.

A gentleman tells us: "Before I commenced taking HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA I had fallen in weight from 165 to 140 pounds. With the first bottle my appetite has returned, my strength is restored and I am rapidly regaining my flesh."

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA is a great blood medicine. I have taken it myself in the spring, when I would be weak and languid. It helps me more than anything else. For a low state of blood there is nothing better. MRS. A. F. ATKINS, Lynn, Mass.

A SEARCHING INVESTIGATION

Resulted in the combination of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is peculiar to itself, is vastly superior to other preparations, and is much more potent in its effects upon the blood and organs of the body. Time and constant use have proved its efficacy beyond a question. The wonderful results from its use, prove more than was ever claimed for it.

"Love my recovery to HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. It deserves the confidence of the public." JOSIAH PITKIN, Chelsea, Vt.

LATEST NOTES ABOUT THE FASHIONS.

[From the N. Y. Evening Post.]

Daffodil and primrose brocades are imported.

Red or green silk silk pompon trimmings are fashionably worn on walking costumes of tweed or nun's gray ladies' cloth.

The new zephyr plaids make jaunty lawn-tennis costumes, and the colors oftenest combined are olive, the new shade of cranberry red, and primrose yellow.

Pale amber and gold beads, or those of pearl and gold, are used to outline silk embroideries on Grecian house robes and matinees of white albatross cloth or vigogne.

Long jersey gloves, ten-button in length, in silk, silk and linen, or finest cachemire, are highly favored for spring wear. These gloves can be found in every desirable street shade.

Raw silks and pongees, in novel tints, quite different from the old gray and ecru shades, will be worn this summer as polonaises or redingotes over short underskirts of velvet or best brand of "Louis" velvet.

Balbriggan stockings abound in the new varied tints of strawberry, amber, terra-cotta, drake's neck blue, laurel green, bronze, elderberry, and a deep rich shade of violet. Each of these colors is clocked with old gold or cream white.

Lilacs, crocus, and arbutus blossoms, laburnum, snowdrops, and, above all, daffodils and jonquils—pale harbingers of spring, "all sprinkled with dew," made of powdered crystals—are the corsage and coiffure bouquets par excellence with dressy evening toilets.

Among other pretty dainties which fashionable young ladies are preparing for summer wear—works of their own hands—are garden party hats of Scello lace, lining the inside of crown and brim with pale blue or rose-colored surah or Canton crape. Another fancy is to run black velvet ribbon through the meshes, finishing with a knot of velvet on top of the crown.

An heirloom of a dress, wrinkled with age, and the weight of the clothes press, lately brought to light to utilize as a costume for a fancy dress party by a youthful butterfly of fashion, was found to be of a shade exactly corresponding with the modern pue known as terracotta. But the owner of the dress—the grandmother of the girl—smiled knowingly and shook her head when the shade was named, saying that the color of her dress when she wore it was just pick nint, and nothing else.

New coaching parasols are displayed, showing gay hand paintings and embroideries of sporting and pastoral scenes, humming birds flights of swallows besides coats of arms, and emblematic devices wrought in silk and studded with half precious gems set in a network of silver and gold threads, and raised tufts of silk chenille. Sometimes it is the monogram only, embroidered in mock jewels upon one division of the parasol, and the design on the mother-of-pearl handle is frequently inlaid to correspond.

A unique style of evening dress affected by many young ladies in society, is a Grecian dress of palest yellow Hindoo cashmere, embroidered in Grecian patterns. Dog-colored kid sandals accompany the dress, worn over stockings of pale mauve-colored silk, embroidered in gold. The flowing, half-long sleeves, also embroidered, are met by long Swedish gloves matched with mauve silk. The corsage is covered with a large bertha of costly lace, fastened at the belt with a cluster of Jacque roses, tea rose-buds, and heliotrope blossoms, are scented, each delicately, with their natural perfumes.

It is now many months since a report was raised that panniers were "a thing of the past," and would be quickly out of style. Many fashion writers, learning of their continued popularity in Paris, denied the statement, and it only needs a very cursory glance around the parlors of our modistes to perceive how very fallacious was their information, and how little probability there exists of a fashion so generally becoming, suddenly ceasing to exist. The continuance of this mode, however, does not prevent equal favor being shown to the redingotes falling plainly over the skirts, or the close-fitting basques and panniels and flowing draperies.

A costly novelty in lingerie is a graceful collar of black velvet or satin, cut in vandykes, and richly embroidered on the deep points with tiny clusters of dark red roses and buds, and black poppies with golden hearts. The edges are finished with slightly gathered ruffles of black guipure lace, with a pleated frill about the neck, of the same lace. These collars are worn without a vestige of white around the throat. Other collars in the same style for evening wear are made of white satin or silk, embroidered in white marguerites outlined with tiny pearl beads, and finished around the points with frills of pearl-beaded Venetian lace.

Beautifully fine, all wool fabrics, in most delicate evening shades of lilac, almond, turquoise blue, crushed strawberry, pale willow green, seashell pink, and primrose, are shown, designed for the "smartest" of ball or reception toilets. French cashmeres in pattern boxes are exquisitely hand painted or embroidered, and require no other trimming. Unmade, these pattern dresses cost $96, and an imported dress of the same material, made up over surah costs $150. But a very much less expensive and equally artistic and beautiful toilet can be produced with the plain fabric in monochrome, simply adorned with ruffles and drapings of cream white lace. Some of our own toilets, made of this material, have bodices of silk or brocade of a tint matching the cashmere shade, but this is a mistake, and should be made as a French woman makes her dresses, with the bodice also of cashmere. Fine wools are now shown to match their bodices of exquisite brocades the shades are so perfect that they will [illegible]

Applique is a very favorite method of decorating the surface of unpatterned materials. Beautiful designs in rich Oriental colorings can now be purchased by the dozen at the fancy stores for a reasonable price. Flights of sparrows and other tiny birds, gay butterflies, roses, carnations, daisies, moss buds, and ivy leaves, and other representations of nature and art are obtainable. A very pretty tablier recently worn over a dress of dark green plush was covered with the eyes of peacock's feathers, manufactured in silk.

With airy summer materials which are difficult to adjust closely to the figure, handsome belts of varied kinds will be stylishly worn. The bodice may then be left a bit looser and kept to the waist by the ceinture. These waistbands are arranged in many ways—fastening at the left side over floating ends of ribbon, or with two costly gold buttons fastened with silk cords, or attached in front by a handsome jewelled buckle or clasp, the latter style giving scope for elegant and artistic belt ornaments; diamonds, brilliants, and real "old paste" being in much request. With these girdles the chatelaines—so pretty and dressy an addition to a lady's dress—will be revived.

Shawl tabliers—that is, with one point either in front or at one side—are seen upon new imported walking dresses. If of heavy material, the tablier is plain and flat, but if draping softly, the same effect is produced by cutting the tablier very long and pleating the sides in folds. Round tunics, raised much higher at one side than at the other, are also much liked. The collection of folds at the short side is usually ornamented by a bow or straps of broad ribbon or velvet run through a buckle and falling in long loops and ends over the skirt, and often these ribbons show six or eight harmonizing colors, each shade being faced with a bright color in contrast.

The fashions and fabrics this year ought to suit everybody, for any material made in almost any style is admirable, provided the dress is perfect in fit. Colors also have a range enough to suit every complexion that nature or art has ever produced. But there is always one prevailing tint, and just now yellow holds that place of honor. Every one is wearing yellow of some shade; houses are draped with yellow hangings, and bonnets, hats, flowers, laces, and dress materials, all have a bilious tendency. Fair and dark beauties, alike, affect the color, whereas until recently it was considered suitable only to brunettes of a decided type; but in its brownish shades it is now thought to be as becoming to fair people as is pink, mauve, or blue. There is an infinite variety of yellows already crowding the store windows and adorning the modiste's parlors, and still there's more to follow. Even now they run from a yellow, Havana brown, and wallflower in all its varieties, to bright pumpkin and sunflower, descending again to pale creamy apricot—loveliest of all. Verily, in these latter days the color-maker goes to the kitchen garden rather than to the conservatory for guidance and inspiration.

The wedding of Congressman John D. White, of Kentucky, and Miss Alice M. Harris, daughter of ex-Congressman Harris, of Massachusetts, occurred Wednesday afternoon in the Unitarian church at East Bridgewater, Mass.

Aaron G. Foss, the messenger of Wells, Fargo & Co., who, several months ago, had a desperate fight with a band of highwaymen on the Central Pacific Railroad, near Montello, Nev., has received a letter from the company enclosing a check for $1,000, accompanied by a gold watch-chain, and seal, as a testimonial.

John Anderson, of Framingham, purchased a cottage on Waverley street about twenty-two years ago, at a sheriff's sale. Deputy Sheriff Bannister, who made the sale, neglected to make a return to the court. Anderson died by accident about four years since. A Medfield man named Welch now claims the property on an old deed, and ejected Widow Anderson from her home, but whether he will hold it or not is still uncertain.

LOOK OUT FOR THE CHILDREN.

[Providence Press.]

The cigarette and the dime novel are just now engaging a great deal of public attention. Both are recognized as powerful agencies in corrupting the minds and bodies of children, especially boys and youth. The traffic in both, too, has remarkably and alarmingly increased in recent years, and has now grown to be so extensive as to warrant public consideration of some remedial or prohibitory action. It has become something more than a sentimental question for moralist oratory. It is time for practical suggestions looking towards a solution of the problem presented.

The cigarette evil naturally falls into a position similar to that occupied by the liquor traffic, so far as concerns any propositions to regulate it by law—that is, the right to control the trade by legal enactment rests upon the same grounds as liquor legislation does. The cigarette is no new invention, but its use by boys is comparatively recent, at least to the present extent. The remarkable growth of the trade in later years too, has led to the use of what can be called little else than street filth in the manufacture of the cigarette. The paper coverings used are also often highly injurious, so that, altogether, the cigarette has come to be regarded with great suspicion, and experienced physicians are frequently uttering warnings against its use. And thus it has come to pass that people who see no particular harm in an occasional good cigar or comforting pipe are joining with the total abstainers from tobacco to protest against the danger to the rising generation from the pernicious adulteration called the cigarette.

There has been much discussion, but New Jersey is proving the pioneer in action on the subject. The Legislature of that State has just passed a bill, and Gov. Ludlow has given it his signature, which imposes a fine of twenty dollars on every person who shall sell a cigarette or tobacco in any form to any child under sixteen years of age. It is rather a cause for regret that the fine was not made heavier, but if the present law is enforced its effect cannot be otherwise than salutary. They have an emphatic way of enforcing laws in New Jersey State; that has rendered "Jersey justice" proverbial. It is to be hoped that an equally determined spirit will be shown in applying this cigarette law, for it will be watched as a sort of precedent to indicate whether legislation of this character may be expected to command the support of public sentiment.

But still wider discussion and alarm are occasioned by the growing influence of "slush" literature, and it is a discouraging fact that there seems to be no good ground for general legislation on this subject. In the first place, no hard and fast line can be drawn which shall say what is corrupting literature and what is not. There are certain specified periodicals which people can call by name and generally agree that it would be a public benefit if these individual periodicals were suppressed. It is to be hoped that State Legislatures may, before many years have passed, be moved to take some such action as this. But even then there would be left a wide range of literature which the better moral sentiment of every well regulated community would condemn, and yet about which there would be considerable discussion as to the justice of legal regulation or prohibition. It is not consistent with our free institutions to establish a censorship of literature, as such, and yet there is a growing feeling, among parents at least that something must be done to protect their children from the baleful influence of these cheap, unhealthy and immoral publications.

We shall probably find that we must look to individual families for the most effective work in this direction. While it is true that many children will spend their pennies for this trash so long as it is put within their reach, it is equally true that more will be restrained from buying if proper means are taken by parents at home to warn the little ones against the danger, or better yet, to see to it that entertaining and instructive books and periodicals of a pure and elevating character—and there is no dearth of such—be put into the children's hands. Every teacher in public and private schools should be called upon to supplement the parents' influence in this great work.

If the Virginia election this year goes against the Bourbons they will have been defeated three times in the past four years and the prospect of their recovering the State in the Presidential campaign will be dubious indeed. They see the danger and are trying to enforce upon the party outside the State the importance of coming to their aid. The Richmond Dispatch thinks that Virginia is more vital to the interests of the Democracy than Ohio is, and it would evidently like to see some of the money and energy which will be spent upon the latter State this year directed toward Virginia. The appeal will probably be in vain, as the Democratic leaders appear to be smitten with the madness of attempting to carry Ohio, the craze which afflicts them the year before each National election.

Several of our exchanges publish the statement that Maj. Ben. Perley Poore, for so many years Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal, has severed his connection with that paper. He remains in Washington, and will contribute to the Boston Sunday Budget his reminiscences of the capital, which are to be printed in book form. Major Poore's connection with the Journal has been so intimate and has covered so long and important a period that we have been inclined to doubt the truth of the report of its discontinuance, because we have seen no reference to it in the Journal itself, which would naturally signalize in some conspicuous way the retirement of the veteran correspondent whose name has become so familiar to New England readers.

The Democratic party cannot do better next year than to make the following nominations: For President, ——; for Vice President, ——. The beauty of this ticket is that it will leave the members of the party free to support the candidate of their individual choice. And since the Republicans, as usual, are going to win in 1884, why should not Democrats indulge themselves in the luxury of casting purely complimentary votes? Besides, the ticket as it stands is considerably stronger than some of those that have emanated from Democratic conventions.—Tribune.

NOT THE WISEST WAY.

The public are willing to concede a great deal of freedom of speech to such a pioneer in temperance reform as Gen. Neal Dow, and it is fair to assume that even in his intemperance of zeal he sincerely intends to benefit the cause. It is hard to perceive, however, just how temperance is promoted by denouncing the Republican party, ignoring its past aid and contemptuously spurning its future sympathy and help. There are also a great many people who are unable to see anything to be proud of or any victory for temperance in Gen. Dow's frequent boast that he and his friends defeated Gov. Davis in 1850 and made Harris H. Plaisted Governor of Maine. After the Republican party of our State has for a quarter of a century made the championship of prohibition a leading issue in its annual contests with the Democratic party, it is a little severe to have Gen. Dow lump the two parties together as enemies of temperance, and declare that there is practically nothing left of Republicanism but an attempted alliance between office-holders and rumshops. Of course great allowance is to be made for the ardor and impatience of one who has devoted many years to a special phase of reform, but we know there are many of the most devoted temperance workers in this city who believe the best way to promote the cause is by recognizing rather than by repelling aid; by enlisting and not by repudiating sympathy; by cultivating harmony and kindly feeling instead of sowing discord and acrimony in the ranks of its friends.

The Republican party of Maine has made a noble fight for temperance for many years, and although it has not achieved all the success that is desirable in extirpating the evils of intemperance, it has been the one politically ally of the cause, and year after year has assumed the sole responsibility of legislation in its behalf. The friends of temperance are looking to that party to-day and for the future as the most powerful instrumentality for its promotion, and we trust that the impatience of some and the ingratitude of others will not cause it to weary of well-doing in the good cause which it has so long and so earnestly espoused.

CORRECTION.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier.

In the second paragraph of that portion of my article in your paper yesterday, which relates to the act protecting moose, deer and caribou, there is an error in stating that the words "other animal," in the statute against torture, were in the act of 1821. These words were afterwards introduced and appear in Sec. 35, Chap. 160 of Revised Statutes of 1840. This, however, does not change the principle or argument.

Truly,

A. G. LEBROKE.

THE DAY FOR DODGING GONE BY.

[From The Philadelphia Record. (Ind.)]

It is the mistake of straddling statesmen like Mr. Hendricks that they under estimate the public intelligence. They think the Democratic party may go into the next Presidential contest without defining its policy in the important matter of tax reduction. They are egregiously mistaken. The day for dodging the tariff question has gone by. The people have a very clear idea of what they want and how to get it.

The Democratic war horses in Kentucky who expected to have the Buberuatorial race all to themselves have been surprised by the appearance of a new competitor in the field. This is Mayor Jacob, of Louisville, and he is likely to prove a troublesome rival to the other candidates. The machine aspirants for the Democratic nomination are Knott, Jones, Owsley and Buckner, all of whom have been in politics for years and who want to round off their career by attorn in the Executive chair. There are pretty strong indications, however, that the people have become weary of this well worn route to the Governorship and think of choosing a man from the ranks.

The Globe has received a letter from Mr. James Dolan, the convict who was pardoned from the State Prison in order that he might "end his days" in the Carney Hospital, but who recovered so rapidly as to be able to take a train out of the State the day after his release. Mr. Dolan, the Globe says, "commends the Governor." We should think likely.—Boston Journal

About two hundred men scattered themselves together at Tremont Temple last evening to listen to a blood-curdling lecture by Mr. Mezzroff, or Mezeroff, who claims to be the father of the nitro-glycerine or dynamite policy, and glories in the proud distinction. He wanted people to be killed by wholesale, he said, and if the innocent suffered with the guilty, why he had the precedent set by the Almighty in the slaying of the first-born in Egypt. He followed up this piece of choice blasphemy by saying that he carried dynamite in his pockets all the time, and chuckled to remember that the other day a lady got on to a car and sat down on two bombs containing six pounds of it. Expressing his regrets that Queen Victoria had not broken her neck when she recently fell down stairs the murderously-minded Mezeroff closed by serving notice that "he would make the tyrannical Nations of the earth suffer before he died." The Professor left for Philadelphia after delivering himself of these sanguinary sentiments, and, if, as is now threatened, he is denied admission to the convention, we shall expect to hear that he has blown Horticultural Hall clear over the top of the Observatory in Fairmount Park, and knocked the whole movement for constitutional agitation into a cocked hat.—Boston Traveller, April 26th.

The most disastrous influence yet discovered as affecting the public health of New York city appears to be the use of hydrant water coming from what are called the dead ends of public water-pipes, which of course are only in existence in the outlying suburbs of the city, like the splendidly built district of Washington Heights. In those cases it is not the plumber who is at fault, but the defective water system, which does not provide a proper circuit for the internal flow of the hydrant water.

Ohio Congressmen at Washington express confidence in Republican success in that State this fall. They say the Germans will not abandon the Republican ticket.

Public Benefactress. Mrs. S. A. Allen has justly earned this title, and thousands are this day rejoicing over a fine head of hair produced by her unequaled preparation for restoring, invigorating, and beautifying the Hair. Her World's Hair Restorer quickly cleanses the scalp, removing dandruff, and arrests the fall; the hair, if gray, is changed to its natural color, giving it the same vitality and luxurious quantity as in youth.
COMPLIMENTARY. "My hair is now restored to its youthful color; I have not a gray hair left. I am satisfied that the preparation is not a dye, but acts on the secretions. My hair ceases to fall, which is certainly an advantage to me, who was in danger of becoming bald." This is the testimony of all who use Mrs. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER.
"One Bottle did it." That is the expression of many who have had their gray hair restored to its natural color, and their bald spot covered with hair, after using one bottle of Mrs. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER. It is not a dye.

The Mystery of the Law!
A lady from the rural district was somewhat astonished at being accosted on Main street last week by one of our policemen and followed with the rare grace and charming "bonhomie," (one of Aristotle's pet words) characteristic of the "force," the "I beg pardon, madam, but we have special orders from the mayor to remove all obstructions from the side walk, and unless you choose to continue your peripatetic rumbles in the street, I shall be obliged to convey you to the Inquisitorial Hall of Justice. She had on a pair of those "widely known boots," known as the dongolas, from Goldtown to Hampden, made from the hides of the Brazilian hogs, known as the dongolas; hence the policeman's request. If anybody cares to subject herself to such indignities as the above, we would say to them that we have the boots named and our heart revolts at asking $6 for them, as some do; $4.50 is all our conscience will allow us to ask. If, however, you want a boot with some style about it, you will shun these goods and wear none but the old reliable
BURT BOOTS,
They have no equals yet. A certain dealer who is trying to make people think he has the best "covering a good deal of ground." Quite right; and could the "drop of things he inverted, and the wearer walk on his hands, the demand would be the brightest. If you want a really fine shoe, as good as any custom-made, get obtainable of us only, and when you want anything first-class article in the whole army of shoe dealer's goods, you will find it with us. "A shocking bad hat" indeed, is a poor silk one, but no such tango, so can be truthfully applied to the hats we furnish to measure; they are conceded by fall to be perfection itself. They have an air, gloss and cosseamor lightness that the clumsy hand-made hat cannot acquire.

MORSE vs. THE COMMERCIAL.

The $20,000 Libel Suit.

[Special to Whig & Courier.]

BANGOR, April 27. The trial of the libel suit of Rev. John Morse vs. J. P. Bass et al., proprietors of the Bangor Commercial, commenced in the Supreme Court, Judge Libby presiding yesterday morning. The case was opened briefly by Mr. Blaine, Esq., who introduced in evidence a copy of the Commercial, dated June 24th, 1880, containing an article which referred to the conduct of the reverend gentleman while pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Dexter, Me. In this article charges against Morse with improper intimacy with Miss Russell, a woman of bad reputation, causing the parsonage to be a place of meeting, and the school teacher's case here and John Brown's case there were opened for evidence, claiming the charges made were substantially true. Frank Woodside, and John W. Springer testified that they saw Morse and woman in compromising situations, the night the Methodist Conference met to attend conference. Two witnesses testified to hearing a woman resembling Miss Ellen Russell in Morse's chamber at one hour or more, when it was said there was no lights in the house. Rev. Mr. McGillis, Esq., of Dexter, testified to the reputation of the parsonage being injured by the presence of Miss Russell, and that he had only one article of furniture to be there was a lounge. Lewis Wade testified that on the night Morse left Dexter for Calais he saw Morse with Miss Russell, and that the conduct of Morse attracted the attention of the people at the station. Frank Tobey testified that he saw him, Morse and Miss Russell, under circumstances which they produced a letter to be read, but, so called and disclaimed.

A paper drawn up by a member of the Congregational church in Dexter, charging Morse with immoral conduct and practices, and the charges contained in the paper were acted upon by the Methodist Conference and caused Morse's dismissal from the ministry.

Testimony of

John Varney, of Bangor,
John F. Lynch, of Machias,
Mr. Sprague, for defence.

Friday's Proceedings.

[Associated Press.]

BANGOR, April 27. In the Supreme Court this morning the case of Morse vs. Bangor Commercial the defence called Mr. Goodridge, who testified he was a resident of Dexter for twenty-four years, and his acquaintance with Eben Russell for a number of years up to 1880 was rather bad. Mr. Springer always a resident of Dexter, and knows Ellen Russell; her reputation for chastity was bad for the last portion of Mr. Tebbets' depositions relating to her character were read, and heard damaging to her character. Witness thought talk she was not chaste was generally; reputation was bad.

Mr. Bradbury, a resident of Dexter, saw Morse and Miss Russell out of the parsonage, passing up Main street; saw Ellen Russell in the house at night; was a member of the church and knew Ebenezer Russell well.

Mr. Marden testified the letter written by Morse contained the morning of February 27th was substantially as follows: I can do nothing, have with the church and the ministry." Morse came to court and sent him. Received letter from Morse about a week after receiving the letter from Morse.

Mr. W. Marden testified that the witness rendered a verdict that Morse was guilty of adultery, but that he was drunk at the time. He remember that Mr. Bridges was one who opposed the verdict.

Mr. Bridges saw Morse the evening before leaving for Calais, by his house; saw the woman meet on Russell Hill and go with Miss Russell. Morse went on towards Mr. Russell's house; next saw Morse come out of the parsonage and go down the bridge before he met the man. They went up the hill to Spring together. My daughter returned and told what she had seen. I called at my house the following morning about the scandal, and after he admitted that he had been in the house with Ellen Russell.

Mr. Brown and T. M. Barnie testified that Morse hired a team and found June 23d, Miss Russell's cap, carefully placed, and no Morse's hat being in the room, drove with no water.

Mr. John Toomey testified to meeting Morse at half past 11 o'clock, the 23d, and stated that he did not know where he was. Said he was after work and was in excitement; met the night watchman at the cars and told him he thought the devil was Morse. He overtook Morse to Mr. Bates' house, where he and stayed an hour. He were out after Noah S. McGary's house substantially the same as Mr. Whitney.

Mr. Whitney testified Morse hired a team on the afternoon of the 23d; had two ladies with him.

Deposition of Volney A. Sprague showing that the Russell girl's character for chastity was bad.

Lady A. Abbott, long a resident of Dexter, testified that she was acquainted with Eben Russell, living in the same house years; her reputation for chastity and previous, was bad. Would say that it was general public talk. Saw a report, June 24, 1880, in the Commercial, that Morse was guilty of adultery.

Mr. Howell testified that he had known the girl twenty years. Her reputation was bad; that Morse promised him that he would have no more to do with the Russell girl, when he told him of her reputation. Morse was seen getting into a team, from Bangor, in company with Miss Russell. Morse used to come frequently with his troubles about the girl. Morse said the Russel girl came to his house once or twice after his wife left for her father's; warned him of the impropriety of his conduct; told him he had no respect for the church or he would stop. Morse made no answer.

The Morse libel case this afternoon the defendant's evidence for the defence was by Dexter, who testified that she saw Morse and Miss Russell in sexual intercourse, May, 1880. This ended the defence. In rebuttal the plaintiff introduced Mrs. Webber's deposition before the church investigation at Dexter in which she stated the last time she saw Morse and Miss Russell together was in March, 1880.

During the year $1,193 98 were raised. The total contributions of the seven branches of the Society were $1,560.27.

Dr. Hartzell made an earnest address as did Mrs. McLaughlin. A contribution of $50 was taken at the close.

The Star Route Trial.

In the Star Route trial Mr. Ker made a bitter attack on Brady. His official orders were cited and his honesty was denied. He had held the key at the Treasury, said Ker, and he had been placed in office to stand between the Treasury and the robbers and had proved false to his trust. He proved to be a traitor.

After a brief interval Henkle, by the peremptory direction of his clients, said he proposed to submit his case to the jury so far as Vaile and Miner were concerned under the instructions of the Court. He had not consulted with the other counsel and did not know what course they would pursue.

Merrick—Of course the Government has no objection to Vaile and Miner's submitting their case.

Wilson—I submit mine.

The Court—We have Brady, Vaile and Miner.

Wilson—Of course this is subject to condition that there will be no further arguments.

The Court (after a pause)—Nobody has spoken for either of the Dorseys. MR. Davidge said he had not had an opportunity to confer with Ingersoll, who was absent.

Mr. Merrick—Do as you please, gentlemen; we have nothing to say.

Davidge said he would confer on the subject with Ingersoll.

The Court—We shall hear from you on Monday morning. Adjourned till Monday.

Notes.

Assistant Secretary French has resumed the duties of Acting Secretary of the Treasury which during his absence have been performed by Assistant Secretary New.

TELEGRAPH LITIGATION.

An Injunction Against the Lease Removed.

NEW YORK, April 27. Judge Freedman in the Superior Court to day vacated the injunction obtained some time ago by Josiah C. Reiff against the Western Union Telegraph Co., Mutual Union Telegraph Co. and others, in which the plaintiff sought to enjoin the defendants from carrying out the lease which had been agreed upon between the two companies. In his order vacating the injunction Judge Freedman says that the defendants are to stipulate that they will not bring any action against the plaintiff or his sureties for damages by reason of the granting of an injunction. The injunction was vacated because stockholders of both companies had agreed to the lease.

THE LAND LEAGUE.

The Convention in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, April 27. The Convention met at 11 A. M. A communication was read from S. S. Cox declaring it was impossible for Ireland to reform under the British Government, on account of the commercial restrictions of the latter.

The resolutions pledge support to fellow citizens of Ireland, propose that all Irish societies be united in Irish National League of America, call for justice and humane consideration of laborers in Ireland, urge people to suport only Irish manufactures, denounce treatment of Irish subjects at hands of British Government and maintain that the policy of the English Government in first reducing the Irish peasantry to abject poverty and then sending them penniless to the United States, dependents upon American charity is unnatural, inhuman and an outrage upon the American Government and people.

The resolutions were adopted after a rather stormy debate. The report of the committee on organization was then read and adopted.

Officers of the new organization were then elected as follows: Alexander Sullivan, of Chicago, President; John Byrne, Cincinnati, Vice President; J. J. Hynes, Secretary; Rev. Charles O'Reiley, Detroit, Treasurer. The Chairman then announced that Mrs. Parnell had been elected President of the Ladies' National League of America. After singing "God Save Ireland," the Chairman pronounced the Convention adjourned without day.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

Several Persons Killed.

DETROIT, April 27. A freight train on the Grand Trunk and Chicago Railroad ran into a passenger train standing on the track near Olivet this morning. The air brakes on the passenger train did not work properly and the train stopped at the foot of a slight grade. A signal was sent back to the heavy freight train following, but for some reason the freight train paid no attention to the signal but ploughed on into the rear of the passenger train, shivering two Pullman cars into fragments. Three persons were killed outright and ten more are reported injured, some it is feared fatally.

THE PARTING HOUR.

Written by the late Edward Pollock, the gifted California poet, on the 6th of January, 1857. It was given by the poet to a friend who was about to depart on a steamer for Oregon, Pollock saying —"Take this; you may, perhaps, read and appreciate the sentiment long after I have ceased to be among the living.

There's something in the "parting hour,"
Will chill the warmest heart,—
Yet kindred, comrades, lovers, friends,
Are faced all to part.
But this I've seen—and many a pang
Has pressed it on my mind—
The one who goes is happier
Than those he leaves behind.

No matter what the journey be,
Adventurous, dangerous, far,
To the wild deep or bleak frontier,
To solitude or war—
Still something cheers the heart that dares,
In all or human kind,
And they who go are happier
Than those they leave behind.

The bride goes to the bridegroom's home
With doubtings and with tears,
But does not Hope her rainbow span
Across her cloudy fears?
Alas! The mother who remains,
What comfort can she find
But this—she goes is happier
Than one she leaves behind.

Have you a friend—a comrade dear,
An old and valued friend?
Be sure your term of sweet concourse
At length will have an end!
And when you part—as part you will—
O take it not unkind,
If he who goes is happier
Than you he leaves behind.

God wills it so—and so it is;
The pilgrims on their way,
Though weak and worn, more cheerful are
Than all the rest who stay
And when, at last, poor man, subdued,
Lays down to death resigned,
May he not still be happier far
Than those he leaves behind?

The above lines were written and placed where they would be found by his parents after his death, by John B. Chase, son of Hooper Chase of this city. The manuscript bears evidence that the copy was not made until he was too weak to accomplish the work in one day.

A NIGHT OF ADVENTURE.

It was a hot, weary morning at the far end of the London season. There were not very many carriages left in the park or the streets, yet Zoe Conington, one of the greatest beauties in society, was driving down dusty Oxford street. And she was crying, quietly beneath the parasol, which she held well over her eyes. Presently the carriage turned up one of the substantial side streets, and stopped in front of a very neat and prosperous looking house. The door was painted a dark green, and on it was a brass plate bearing this inscription. "Mr. Edgar's Home for Trained Nurses." Mrs. Conington quickly left her carriage, rang the bell at the door, and was immediately admitted. She was shown into the "office," where she found Mr. Edgar and his Lady Superintendent, both apparently very busy at large writing-tables.

"I want a nurse, Mr. Edgar," said Zoe Conington rather helplessly. She knew her eyes were red and she did not like the feeling.

"Certainly," said Mr. Edgar; "what sort of case?"

"It is for my sister," said Zoe. "I really don't understand what's the matter. They say she has what they call anæmia, and the doctor who attends her fears she will not live long. I believe he is an old fogey and does not understand the case."

"Then you want a nurse of experience" said Mr. Edgar.

"Exactly," said Zoe eagerly; "and I should be so glad if I could have one that is indoors as well—not a common hospital nurse. You see my sister is quite alone, without any lady friend, and I can't go to her because her husband doesn't like me."

"Nurse Harcourt," said Mr. Edgar to the Lady Superintendent who nodded and rang a bell. "She is exactly what you want," he added, turning to Zoe. "She is an experienced and clever nurse, and she is a lady. We don't have many like her. She belongs to a good family. I feel sure you will like her. Come in, Miss Harcourt," as the nurse thus named entered. "This lady wants you to go to her sister."

"What is the case, sir?" said Nurse Harcourt.

"It is said to be anæmia."

"I can undertake that, I think, sir."

"Of course you can," put in the Lady Superintendent.

Zoe had quickly taken in the girl's appearance. She was slender, active, with an intelligent and interesting face. Her features were not good, yet there was a charm of color about her. She had large and very dark eyes, and strong dark eyebrows, while her thick hair, cut quite short, was all bright with warm gold and red. This certainly was not Zoe's idea of a "common hospital nurse!"

"I don't know whether I ought to say so," said she to the nurse "but I don't think the doctor understands the case. Have you often nursed anæmia?"

"Yes, in the hospital," said Nurse Harcourt; "and I have had cases since in which it was present. I don't think I should be easily deceived in it."

"Then you must have my address," said Zoe; "and write or telegraph to me direct, as you think not. If there is any mistake being made in the treatment, I will send down a physician at once. Will you undertake this?"

"Yes," said Nurse Harcourt with a quick, bright smile; "I think I can undertake that. Shall I get ready, sir?"

"Lostayvil," said Zoe, "somewhere near Penzance—a wretched little river fishing-place. People ought not to go so far away from everybody. Is there any chance of her getting there to-night?"

"Lostayvil—oh, yes; she can get there at 10. The train starts in half an hour. She must have some sandwiches made up to take with her," he said to the Lady Superintendent, who arose and hurried away, pen in hand, to give orders.

Mrs Conington drove to a telegraph office, and sent a "wire" to her brother-in-law. "From Zoe Conington, Hyde Park Gate, to Edward Mertoun, The Old Hall, Lostayvil. Your account of Agatha has alarmed me exceedingly. I am sending her a nurse, as I think it may be a comfort. She will arrive at the Lostayvil Station at about ten. If you cannot send for her, she will find some conveyance."

Nurse Harcourt, dressed all in gray, and with a gray veil over her bright hair and clever face, caught the express, and took her seat without any fuss or excitement, although she had only half an hour to get ready and reach the station in. When she arrived at Lostayvil it was a clear, sweet night; the station seemed to stand alone on a fragrant and indistinct desert, with no sign of any houses near.

"Is there anything come to fetch me from the Old Hall?" asked she, in her clear, determined young voice.

"Nothing at all, miss," said the solitary porter, and then, after a second's pause during which he shouldered her box, "so I suppose you'll go to the hotel."

"No, indeed," said Ada, who immediately suspected him of being in the pay of that same hotel. "I must get to the Old Hall to-night. I suppose I can get something to drive in?"

"There's post-horses at the hotel," said the porter dubiously.

"Take me there, then," said Ada. It seemed to her that she walked about a mile and a half after him over a lonely road. At last they arrived at an inn entrance round which there were some signs of sleepy village life. After a stern interview with the dull landlord, Ada succeeded in getting him to have out a "go'shay" and two horses for her. A driver was extracted from the bar, where he was drinking; he came out surly, and, getting on the box after Ada and her luggage had been waiting some time in the "shay," began to whip the horses. This amusement he continued to indulge in till they arrived at the "Old Hall," taking the horses at a rapid gallop up hill and down dale.

The Old Hall stood high, with a wide lawn about it, dotted by clumps of fine trees. On the way Ada was charmed by glimpses of the winding silver stream and the wooded hills about it. All was very lovely; yet something in the aspect of the Old Hall made her shiver as she approached it. It was very dark; only one window seemed dimly lit; the front door appeared to be hermetically sealed. But Ada courageously rang and knocked and while she waited for an answer, filled up the time by paying her surly driver the fabulous sum he demanded of her. At last the door moved; it opened slowly, and on the steps stood a tall man.

"Are you the nurse?" he said.

"Yes," answered Ada.

The coachman whipped up his horses in the familiar style and rattled away. A servant who looked like a groom came out and lifted Ada's box into the hall. A lamp stood on a table there, and by its light Ada tried to discover what sort of house she was in. She was standing in a big, old-fashioned hall or house-place. Opposite her, his hands deeply buried in his pockets, stood the man who was evidently master.

"I told the man to get a room ready for you," he said. "The man shall light you up there, and you can see my wife in the morning. Shall he bring you some supper?"

"If you please," said Ada. "First I'll take of my hat, and if you will allow me I'll go to my patient at once."

"Nonsense!" said Mr. Mertoun; "you must sleep after a journey."

"But it is my duty to see her first, if you please, sir."

Ada followed the man-servant upstairs to a little bedroom where he left her, saying he would bring her some supper. She washed her hands and combed out her bright hair. When he came back she said, "Shall I find Mr. Mertoun downstairs?"

"He's gone to his own room," said the "groom, and he says missus is asleep, and not to be disturbed."

"Which is her room?" asked Ada. "I must know, because I've come down to nurse her."

"I'll show you the door," said the man. He led her a little way along a corridor, and pointed up a short staircase. "The door on the left," he said, and immediately hurried off, carrying his light with him.

"This is a queer house," thought Ada. However, she found her way back to her own room by the glimmer of light from its doorway. Then, taking her candle, she went straight to the door of the room the man had shown her. She knocked gently; there was no answer. So she quietly turned the handle and looked in. A solitary candle lit a large room; she could but dimly perceive that on the bed lay a woman who, seeing her, started up as if in terror, and then fell helplessly back again. Evidently this was the sick room. Ada shut the door, put down her candle, and approached the bed.

"Don't be frightened," she said; "I am a nurse your sister has sent down to take care of you."

"I thought you were a spirit," said Agatha Mertoun, "I have had strange visions to-day." Then she relapsed into a silence, and seemed to forget Ada's presence. After awhile she spoke again, "I am dying," she said.

Ada went close to her, and looked into her eyes. They were very strange. Suddenly the unhappy woman was seized with a violent sickness. Ada, with her quick wits, noticed some things which made her wonder. When her patient, weary and exhausted, lay back again on her pillow, she began to make a tour of the room. There were a great many bottles in different places. She took out all the corks and smelled at the contents. Suddenly while thus engaged, she happened to look toward the bed, and met Agatha's eyes fixed on her with a gaze full of some extraordinary meaning or intelligence. It almost frightened even the brave Ada. She put down the bottle quickly and went to the bedside. But Agatha had closed her eyes, as if too weak to keep them open. Looking earnestly at her, Nurse Harcourt realized how wonderfully lovely she was, in spite of the deadly pallor which lay on her face. Suddenly the sickness came again; and then a violent spasm.

"This is a queer sort of anæmia," said Ada to herself, and after a long look at her patient began to smell at the physic bottles. Just then she heard a light sound at the door. Hastily approaching it, and opening it, she saw Mr. Mertoun disappearing through the opposite door. "He wanted to watch me," she thought. "Now what can this mean?" She locked the door on the inside, and continued her investigations. Suddenly she came upon a bottle inside a cupboard, nearly empty, the smell from which almost made her cry out. But she remembered her patient and refrained. She merely put the bottle into her pocket, and then, without hunting about any more, went back to watch poor Agatha. The color of her face grew steadily worse, and her weakness was rapidly increasing.

"What on earth am I to do?" exclaimed Nurse Harcourt at last, "in this out of the way place? I can't see her die before my eyes. If I could only get the doctor!"

She had spoken out loud, thinking Agatha quite unconscious. But she was not. She opened her eyes and appeared to express something by their earnest gaze. It seemed as if she understood Ada's words.

"It's the only thing to be done, I believe," said Ada to herself, "and I'll do it." She took out her watch and looked at it—half past three. Going to the window, she drew the curtain a little aside. There was a faint gray haze all over the world; but the light would be enough to find one's way by, and every moment brought the dawn nearer. "If I did but know the way," she thought. "Well I must wake up some one and ask it."

Having made up her mind, she no longer hesitated. She took a final survey of her patient and then left the room. She locked the door on the outside, and took the key with her. Quickly entering her own room, she caught up her gray cloak and traveling hat, and put them on as she hurried down stairs. "If I only knew where the servants sleep" she thought, "but I'm so afraid of rousing Mr. Mertoun. I'll wake up some cottage people."

With some considerable difficulty she opened the front door, and then drew it close behind her without absolutely shutting it. To her delight she found it would stay so without moving; this would enable her to enter the house again quietly. As quickly as swift feet would carry her she hurried out of the grounds. She saw no cottages; so she went on along the widest road, hoping to reach some habitation in time. To her delight she saw at last a hedger and ditcher trudging away to his work. She ran after him and, almost breathless with her quick movement and excitement, caught him by the arm while she asked him her question.

Not more than a mile. Nurse Harcourt started. Soon her way accomplished, she thought. Had she but known how strange is the Cornish mind on the subject of distances, she might have stayed to ask further information. But, instead, she hurried away, leaving the working-man to stare after her in concerted and bewildered amazement. The cross roads were reached before long, and then she turned to the right, and hurried quickly along.

PENOBSCOT FARMERS' CLUB

A meeting of the Penobscot Farmers' Club was held at the Fuller school house in Bangor, on Saturday, April 21st. Vice President R. H. Hunt presided. Owing to bad traveling, the attendance was not as large as usual, but the meeting was a very interesting one, and we think from the interest taken in the discussion, it will prove a benefit to the members hereafter.

Question of the previous meeting,—Resolved, that the canning of sweet corn can be made a profitable branch of farming in Penobscot County? was taken from the table for further discussion.

Mr. Morton said, when in the town of Gorham, he found most of the farmers were raising sweet corn for the canning factories, and they were highly pleased with the results, as they generally realized about $75 per acre for the corn delivered at the factory, and the fodder left for their cows, and as they were making milk for the Portland market, they found it of greater value than the western corn usually raised for feeding. This is a branch of farming that is not an experiment like the sugar beet, for the canning of sweet corn has been carried on in this State for more than fifteen years, and had never known of a failure except from J. Winslow Jones' factories, and these were brought about from other causes.

Mr. Ferguson said he did not know but little in regard to the raising of sweet corn, but thought there was not any danger of this State producing too much sweet corn for when in California he found they were using canned corn that was put up in Maine, and there is a growing demand for it in all parts of the world, for the sweet corn of the State of Maine is sweeter, and has a finer flavor than that of any State, and is as the proclamation in all the Southern markets, and can see no reason why it cannot be made a profitable branch of farming in Penobscot county.

Mr. Copeland said: I think that we can raise yellow corn at a profit in this county, and can't see any reason why we cannot raise sweet corn and make it pay as well as we can yellow corn. Think no one will claim that every acre of land in Penobscot county is adapted to corn, but I do think a large part of it can be made to produce good corn.

Mr. Leighton said: I think there is not an acre of land in the vicinity of Bangor but that can be made, with proper care, to produce good sweet corn at a profit, for I have raised it successfully where I should have thought it impossible to raise any kind of corn.

Mr. Griffin said he thought well of the business, and if there was a factory built in the vicinity of Bangor, the farmers could make the raising of sweet corn a profitable branch of farming.

Voted, That a committee of three be appointed at the meeting of the Club in June, to devise means for the building of a canning factory in the vicinity of Bangor.

Voted, That the next meeting of the Penobscot Farmers' Club be held at the Town Hall in Hampden, on Wednesday, June 20.

RELIABLE TESTIMONY.

Hop Bitters Co

I am 74 years old, have lived 34 years in Philadelphia, and well known among Germans. I have been troubled 12 years with a white swelling on my right foot, and getting worse every year, and very painful, and breaking out in hot weather. I consulted several doctors and they told me it was incurable, and that I would have to take it with me to the grave. Some time ago I lost my appetite, was costive, had headache, and fever, in fact was very sick. I saw in the German Democrat that Hop Bitters was what I needed. I got a bottle, took it one week and was as well as ever, and to my greatest surprise right from the first, my swelling went down gradually and I taking another bottle got entirely well of it. The wife of my neighbor had two such swellings on her legs and three bottles cured her. I think this is a great triumph for your bitters.

STIFFSHILL, IND., Nov 13, 1881.

DEAR SIRS—I have read so much about Hop Bitters and always being sill cited with neuralgia, weakness, diseased stomach, never having much health I tried a couple bottles; it has strengthened and helped me more than any medicine or doctor. I am now on my third bottle and am thankful that it has helped me. I will advise all that are afflicted to give it a trial.

Hop Bitters Co.

I have not been well for three years, tried almost every kind of patent medicines and no less than seven doctors, one of Elmira, N. Y., none have done me any good. I finally tried your Hop Bitters and found them just the thing. I have praised them so highly there is a great number here who use them with great benefit and satisfaction.

Very Respectfully yours, R. HUNT.

GENTLEMEN—The "Hop Bitters" meet with large sales and give general satisfaction; one case in particular you should know of. Mr. John B. Greene, 728 Spring Garden St., Phila., Pa., has been suffering from kidney affection, which superinduced rheumatism. He tried physicians and remedies in vain. He was obliged to take morphine to induce sleep, his trouble was so great. Reading your advertisement in the "Christian at Work," he was prevailed upon by one of his daughters to try it. Three bottles effected a cure, and now he is an enthusiast for "Hop Bitters." He is one of the oldest residents in the locality named; and known as a gentleman of unusual probity.

I have been troubled with vertigo since last July, and have suffered greatly every night after any considerable exertion, from dizziness and blindness. I have tried two bottles of Hop Bitters, and since then have been entirely relieved.

I have been suffering five years past with neuralgia, liver complaint, dyspepsia and kidney complaint, and I have doctored with fourteen different doctors who did me no good. At last I tried Hop Bitters, and after I used a few bottles I received a great benefit from them, and if I had used Hop Bitters regularly I would have been well before. I know them to be the best medicine in the world for nervous diseases of all kinds.

WICKED FOR CLERGYMEN.

"I believe it to be all wrong and even wicked for clergymen or other public men to be led into giving testimonials to quack doctors or patent medicines, but when a really meritorious article composed of valuable remedies known to all, and that all physicians use and trust in daily, we should freely commend it. I therefore cheerfully, and heartily commend Hop Bitters for the good they have done me and my friends, firmly believing they have no equal for family use. I will not be without them.

REV. E. R. ——, Washington, D. C.

A good Baptist clergyman of Bergen, N. Y., a strong Temperance man, suffered with kidney trouble, neuralgia and dizziness almost to blindness, over two years after he was advised that Hop Bitters would cure him, because he was afraid of and prejudiced against the word "bitters." Since his cure he says none need fear but trust in Hop Bitters.

My wife and daughter were made healthy by the use of Hop Bitters and I recommend them to my people.—Methodist Clergyman, Mexico, N. Y.

I had severe attacks of Gravel and Kidney trouble; was unable to get any medicine or doctor to cure me until I used Hop Bitters, and they cured me in a short time.—A distinguished lawyer and temperance orator of Wayne County, N. Y.

Terrible Suffering.

Kidney and Bladder Complaints of Many Years Duration—His Wife Cured of Cistitis.

"He was a familiar figure on the bank in the vicinity of a well known stock broker, Gouverneur Morris, Gouverneur Morris, Gouverneur Morris, and others, a charming, vivacious, jovial, generous, kind-hearted gentleman, as all know, but he was the victim of intense bodily suffering. He had been the victim of kidney trouble for years, and was the victim of cistitis, which had been pronounced incurable. He was a wreck, physically, and mentally. He was as good as a bank note at any bank in Boston, and I know it," was the opinion of a prominent citizen in speaking of City Assessor Francis. Your reporter found Mr. Francis at his pleasant home, which, with his mother, is on Sumner street and fronts the Common. Mr. Gouverneur Morris, and many of my friends in Lowell, suffered from kidney and urinary troubles. My physician said it was the result of old and neglected kidney and bladder troubles. I had suffered terribly, and despite the best treatment I had been able to obtain, I was growing worse. I finally said to my doctor, 'Doctor, I'm no good. You have done all in your power to do, I know, but I am worse than I was when you first commenced to treat me. I feel that I am a wreck, and I want you to give me your honest opinion of my case. Tell me the truth, I can stand it, I want to know the worst. Can you help me? Can you give me any hope of a cure?' The doctor said that the cistitis had been caused by my kidney trouble, and that I was in a very critical condition. I had been under the doctor's care for a long time, and had taken his medicine faithfully, but I was growing worse. I had tried other physicians, but they had failed to help me. I was in a terrible condition. I was in a wreck. My friends thought I was a dying man. I was in a wreck. My friends thought I was a dying man. I was in a wreck. My friends thought I was a dying man
